One Hundred Dollars Reward.

RAN away from the Subscriber, on Tuesday the second of this inst. April, living in Kent county, Maryland, near Chester Town, the following described Negroes, viz. William, about 5 feet 5 or 6 inches high, a yellowish complexioned fellow, about thirty years of age, formerly the property of doctor William Matthews, he has been very much given to running away, and has been so often described in the public papers within this twelve months that any further description of him seems needless.—Jacob, about 6 feet high, and about 32 years of age, of a common Negroe complection, down look, his little finger of his left hand stands straight, occasioned by the cut of a sickle. Patt, the wife of said Jacob, about 27 years of age, a small light made woman of a yellowish complection, with thick lips for an American of her stature, she is a very good needle woman, and spins on either small or great wheel, and is very handy in any common house work.—Two children of the said Jacob's and Patt's, the one a male child about four years old, the other a female child about two years old. The above described Negroes took with them, besides their own wearing apparel, three coats, two of which were linsey cloth of a light grey color, both new; one of the two was a great deal too large for either of the said fellows; the other coat of brown cloth, half worn; three under jackets, one a velvet, another a drab, the other a light colored linsey cloth do, one new pair of Calf skin shoes, lined with linnen and bound with leather, one pair of boots remarkably large in the legs, several pairs of stockings and a silver watch, all stolen: their own wearing apparel as follows—William had on a light-horse regimental coat worked with silver twist, (which coat he had when he was brought home to me the first of February last, a round sailor jacket (blue,) thickset breeches, patched with corduroy in the stride, with other necessary clothing. Jacob, two linsey cloth coatees, lead colored, one new the other half worn, blue linsey cloth jacket, half worn, two pairs of linsey cloth trowsers, of a lead colour, the one new the other half worn, tolerable good shoes and stockings. Patt has every day cloathing, and her children wore home-made linen and linsey, her other cloathing not so well known; it is uncertain which course they may take, as William is such an experienced coaster.

Any person or persons apprehending said negroes or sounding them, so that their master may get them again, shall be entitled to the above reward, or in proportion for either of them, that is to say, 40 dollars for each of the fellows, and twenty dollars for the wench and children, and if brought home, all reasonable charges paid by

CHARACTER OF A TRUE POET.

The favour'd Bard,
Who nobly conscious of his just reward,
With loftier soul and undecaying might,
Paints what he feels in characters of light.
He turns: and instantaneous all around
Cliffs whiten, waters murmur, voices sound,
Portentous forms in heav'n's aërial hall
Appear, as at some great supernal call.
Thence oft in thought his steps ideal (x) haste
To rocks and groves, the wilderness or waste;
To plains, where Tadmor's (y) regal ruins lie
In desolation's sullen majesty;
Or where Carthusian (z) towr's the pilgrim draw,
And bow the soul with unresisted awe,
Whence Bruno, from the mountain's pine-clad brow,
Survey'd the world's inglorious toil below;
Then, as down ragged cliffs the torrent roar'd,
Prostrate great Nature's present GOD ador'd,
And bade, in solitude's extremest bourn,
Religion hallow the severe sojourn.

To HIM the Painter gives his pencil's might;
No gloom too dreadful and no blaze too bright,
What time to mortal ken he dares unveil
The inexpressive FORM (a) in semblance frail,
To the strain'd view presents the yawning tomb,
Substantial horrors, and eternal doom.

To HIM the Pow'rs of harmony (b) resort,
And as the Bard, with high commanding port,
Scans all th' ethereal wilderness around,
Pour on his ear the thrilling stream of sound;
Strains, from that full-strung chord at distance swell,
Notes, breathing soft from musick's inmost cell,
While to their numerous pause, or accent deep,
His choral passions dread accordance keep.

Thence musing, lo he bends his weary eyes
On life and all its sad realities;
Marks how the prospect darkens in the rear,
Shade blends with shade, and fear succeeds to fear,
Mid forms that rise, and flutter through the gloom,
'Till Death unbar the cold sepulchral room.

Such is the Poet: bold, without confine,
Imagination's "charter'd libertine!" (c)
He scorns, in apathy, to float or dream
On listless Satisfaction's torpid stream,
But dares ALONE in vent'rous bark to ride
Down turbulent Delight's tempestuous tide;
While thoughts encount'ring thoughts in conflict fierce
Tumultuous rush, and labour into verse,
Then, as the swelling numbers round him roll,
Stamps on th' immortal page the visions of the soul.

(x) I speak of the effect of local situation on the mind of the poet. But if any man of genius, fancy, and learning, in the vigour and noon-day of his life and faculties should, from some circumstance for ever to be regretted, be unfortunately deprived of the power of visiting these great and awful scenes of nature, and the monuments of ancient art; an imagination bold and fervid may, in some degree, supply that want by recourse to the most finished representations of them by the more sublime painters and artists. Stuart, Wood, and Piranesi may raise ideas worthy of the Poet, and pour upon his fancy all the ancient dignity of Athens, of Palmyra, and of Rome. Alas! these scenes are closed for ever. Non Ego sum vates, sed prisci conscius ævi!—I cannot but present my reader with the form of an Oath on such a subject, from the last classical Poet under the expiring monarchy of France, the famous Delisle. I am as ready on this subject, as himself, to swear at the high altar of the Muses:

"Helas! ja n'ai point vû ce séjour enchanté,
Ces beaux lieux ou Virgile a tante de fois chanté;
Mais j'en JURE et Virgile et ses accords sublimes,
J'irai: de l'Apennin je franchirai les cimes,
J'irai, plein de son nom, plein de ces vers sacrés,
Les lire aux mêmes lieux qui les ont inspirés.

(y) He built Tadmor in the Wilderness." Chron. B. 2. ch. 8. v. 4. It is remarkable that Mr. Wood observes, that the natives, at this day, called Palmyra by the original appllation of Tadmor.

(z) The famous monastery, called "The Grande Chartreuse." The retirement of Saint Bruno.

(a) The Pictures of the Supreme Being by Raphael and Michael Angelo. There is one pictures of THE SUPREME BEING separating the light from the darkness, in the Vault of the Capella Sestina in Rome, by Michael Angelo which, I believe, has never been engraved. Mr. Fuseli, I think, said so when I enquired about it. I allude also to the Picture of the Last Judgment, by the same Master.

(b) The powers of Music on the mind of the Poet.

(c) "The air, a chartered libertine, is still." Shakspeare. H. V.

ANTHONY PASQUIN.

Continued.

On the 10th of August, the following Answer appeared, addressed to the Editor.

MR. CONDUCTOR,

Having promised to give the public an account of the affair, which some weeks ago happened between myself and a person assuming the name of Anthony Pasquin (a circumstance which I cannot but lament as unfortunate, it having been the means of bringing my name into competition with one so contemptible) this and another consideration, weighs with me to trouble you once more about this business, which has already taken up too much of your time.

Having purchased the lease of Richmond Theatre, on the 18th of June it was opened under my direction, and was honored by the performance of several Gentlemen amateurs of the Drama. In the course of the evening, the person calling himself Anthony Pasquin, in company with Mr. Swan, came behind the scenes, when they entertained themselves as long as they liked, and were then passed by Mr. Williames into the boxes: on their return to the stage door, the servant refused them admittance, mistaking them for some other persons. In a short time I received from the Talbot Inn, two notes, each superscribed "TO CAPTAIN WATHEN."

One of them from Mr. Swan, complained of the circumstance before-mentioned, but in very gentlemanly terms spoke of it as an offence. The contents of the other were conveyed in the following laconic terms:

"Sir,

"You are an impertinent puppy.

(Signed) ANTHONY PASQUIN."

Being concerned in the performance, I had not time to send a written answer, but sent Mr. Lawrence, a person confidentially employed by me, to apologize to Mr. Swan, for the supposed offence, which was entirely unintentionally on my part: but he was directed, if he were asked for an answer to the other note, to say, that I did not know such a person as Anthony Pasquin. Mr. Swan was well satisfied, as he afterwards assured me; but from the other I received, by Lawrence, another note, couched in the following words:

"You are a Scoundrel and a Coward."

(Signed) "ANTHONY PASQUIN."

As soon as the entertainment which I acted, was over, I sent Capt. Davies, and Mr. Williames, to the Talbot, while I waited at the Castle Tavern, being determined to bring the matter to an immediate issue. When they returned, they told me, to my great astonishment, that the person was gone an hour before; the matter was of course, obliged to rest there for a time. The next day I went to London, accompanied by Mr. Williames, in search of him; I could not find him—but with some difficulty I did at his lodgings—for he did not live at the place which his card of address expressed.

I left a note for him, saying, that though I seldom attended to what came from an anonymous scoundrel, yet I would certainly cane him for his insolence, in the first place I met him; this did not happen till two or three days after, which was in the Haymarket Theatre, when I was in company with Mr. Barrymore, whom I sent to him, to say, that I insisted on his making me a written apology, or the consequence would be what I threatened in my note. He refused the alternative, and refused also to come to me. I waited till the play was over, when he came into the lobby: I there spoke to him, and desired him to bring a friend, for I was determined to settle the business that night. It was with much reluctance that he came, and at last brought Mr. Young. Mr. H. Angelo joined us by accident. I proposed to go to the Spring Garden Coffee-House, which he refused, but at last be fixed on the Shakespeare Coffee-House in Bow-street; where Mr. Barrymore, as my friend, and Mr. Young as his, with ourselves, retired to a private room, Mr. Angelo remaining in the Coffee-room below stairs. After an hour and half spent in endeavoring to persuade him to apologize to me for the very gross offence he had given me, in which time he had frequently been alone with Mr. Young and Mr. Barrymore—(in one of these intervals, though he had a stick in his hand, he drew a knife, and on being asked by Mr. Barrymore, why he did so? He replied, "to pair his nails")—It now became absolutely necessary for me, in defence of my own character, to do something that should put a marked indignity on him: he was going out of the room, when I stepped between him and the door, and prevented it; he then a second time drew his knife, swearing he would use it for other purposes than pearing his nails—when Mr. Barrymore took it out of his hands, saying, "that if it must come to blows, we were equally armed, each having a stick." He then, with Mr. Young, retired to a corner of the room, leaving us to ourselves. I then hit the man (whom I am mortified in the extreme to call my adversary) a slight stroke on the hat, which knocked it off his head, meaning to do no more if he had not: he returned me the blow with his stick on the left cheek, and closed with me. I then, with the end of my cane, hit him in the side, in order to disentangle myself, which when I had effected, I struck him a blow with my cane on the head, which staggered him. I then repeated the stroke, which came in contact with his teeth, and took two of them out; on which he immediately fell on his knees, and literally roared for mercy, begging my pardon in the most abject and humiliating terms—which, when Mr. Barrymore perceiving, and dreading, as I had been greatly provoked, that I might have been irritated to a repetition of the blows; advanced and wrested my stick from my hand, observing, that I had beat him enough. At this time I heard voices on the outside of the room, which seemed to approve of my conduct. I opened the door, desiring the gentlemen who were there, and who had been at supper in another room, and had been bro't there by the noise, to walk in. For, as my provocation had been great, I was resolved to have as many witnesses as possible of his humiliation. While they were entering, he had risen from his knees, which I perceiving, I insisted on his going down on them once more; which he did with some reluctance, for not having my stick, I was obliged to kick him on the shins till he did, when he again begged my pardon. He was then permitted to retire, amidst the scorn, contempt, hisses and groans of the following gentlemen:

Mr. Johnstone, Mr. Scott, Mr. Kirwan, Mr. Davis, Mr. Davies, Mr. Angelo, and captain Gregory of the Guards. I have received no other damage than the blow first mentioned, and a severe laceration of the little finger of my left hand, which was done by a violent bite when he closed with me.

AFFIDAVIT.

Thomas Young, of Brighthelmstone, gentleman, and William Barrymore, of Richmond, gentleman, severally make oath and say, that the contents of the above stated narrative, (as far as they are stated to be within their knowledge) are precisely the truth; and that the behaviour and conduct of capt. Wathen was, through the whole of the business, as far as they saw it, that of a man of honor, spirit and humanity: And Thomas Young, for himself saith, that Mr. Barrymore never did, at any time kick or strike the person called Anthony Pasquin, or even touch him, save only the time when he took the knife from him; and furthermore this deponent saith, that so far from the said Anthony having received from Mr. Barrymore any injury, that when they retired to the lodgings of the said Anthony, about half an hour after the affray, he, the said Anthony, in presence of Mr. Davis and this deponent, expressed his approbation of Mr. Barrymore's conduct, and refused even to open the door to Davis, till he was informed that Barrymore was at the door with him, when, the said Anthony said, "I'll let Barrymore in, and nobody else;" and this deponent further saith, that said Pasquin did accept of little services and attentions from Mr. Barrymore, immediately after the affray, which cannot but do away any odium that said Pasquin has thrown upon said Barrymore relative to said Barrymore's kicking, and otherways ill-using him.

THOMAS YOUNG,
WILLIAM BARRYMORE.

Mr. William Barrymore, and
Mr. Thomas Young,

Sworn before me this eighth day of August, 1792, to the above contents,

FRANCIS SERGISON.

Cuckfield-Place,
in the county of Sussex.

After having stated thus much, I hold it a most egregious waste of time to comment on the nonsensical rhapsody he has obtruded on the public. I did, indeed, intend to say a few words relative to Mr. Barrymore, whose profession renders him so liable to the assassin like stabs of this miscreant; but the affidavit of Mr. Young so fully and fairly does away the intended mischief to his character, that I shall forbear——and now forever I have done with John Williams, alias Anthony Pasquin. I might as amply refute the other falsehoods he has with bold and unblushing impudence asserted, but I hold them in as much contempt as I do their author. In vain may he flatter himself that he shall ever again be honored by the slightest notice from me—in vain may he hope so far to provoke me as to gain a repetition of what he has so justly received at my hands—in vain may he expect, that, after having so justly obtained the contempt and abhorrence, he shall ever by my means be entitled to the pity of mankind. G. WATHEN.

Richmond, August 9.

[So much for Anthony Pasquin, Esquire! Such, when not more infamous, has been the tenor of a life, which, we are given to understand, is in future to be devoted to our illumination! The room occupied for this developement, cannot be judged to be ill appropriated, when the reader is apprized, that Anthony Pasquin has recently commenced to publish a newspaper at New-York. This person wears his feigned name with the alias of John M. Williams attached to it, whereas in Europe, that of John Williams was the appendage to the fictitious signature: this, with the report of Federalists having extended their auspices to this Anthony, authorizes a doubt whether he be the same person or not.]

CONTINUATION OF

Late Foreign Articles

VIA NEW-YORK.

LONDON, January 4.

We understand that ministers have received information that the rabble of Naples, as soon as they saw their majesties embark on board the Vanguard, rose into insurrection, and committed the most diabolical excesses both of murder and pillage. Numbers of the nobility were massacred, and even one of the king's children, it is said, was trampled to death by the mob at the place of embarkation. Many of the principal palaces and hotels of the nobility were plundered, and the city continued in the utmost disorder.

The Vanguard, with the Royal Family on board, after suffering a severe storm, had arrived in the Bay of Palermo.

Feb. 4.

The Paris papers to the 27th of January inclusive, did not come to hand on Saturday morning till after our paper was at press;—but we hope that our readers will be sufficiently indemnified by the accuracy of the account which we this day give of their contents.

The most authentic article is the letter of general Championet to the directory, dated at head quarters, Capau, January the 4th, which informs us of the exact position of the different armies at that period.

The left wing of the republicans had not advanced beyond Pescara, upon the Adriatic Gulph; the right was at Gaeta, upon the Mediterranean; and the centre before Capua.

It seems wonderful, that the two former places should not have held out longer against the enemy, both being well fortified, provided with a numerous garrison, and amply supplied with ammunition and provisions; more especially as the rigours of the season might have prolonged the difficulties of the siege. General Mack having failed in his attempt to procure an armistice, and having refused, upon the summons of the French, to deliver up Capua, was moving dispositions to hazard a general engagement, upon the issue of which would certainly depend the fate of the kingdom of Naples.

Capua, situated upon the left bank of the Volturno, at the descent of the Appenines, and tolerably fortified, having a strong castle, and is considered as the key of the kingdom. General Mack, by supporting his left wing near this city, and his right upon Ancient Capua, whose vast amphitheatre, and many other buildings, afford extensive means of defence, may be able for a time to keep the enemy at bay—the more so, because so situated, he cannot be turned.

It appears by leters from Florence, of the 9th ult. that on the 7th the two armies were still in sight of each other, and remained in the same position. Some journalists, however, pretend, that, that our government is in possession of dispatches of a more recent date, which state that Naples is in the power of the French. We nether know the source of this intelligence, nor the degree of credit which it deserves.

The king of Naples, after having experienced some impediment to his embarkation, occasioned by the Lazzaroni, and after having been exposed to a dreadful tempest, had arrived at Palermo, on the 25th of Dec. on board the Vanguard, commanded by admiral Nelson. He had left behind him at Naples, the prince Pignatelli, to govern in the capacity of viceroy.

From some private intelligence we are led to fear, that the insurrection of the Lazzaroni has occasioned, in that capital, some very sanguinary scenes.

It was upon the 4th of January, that the Neapolitans evacuated Tuscany, and that our squadron raised the blockade of Leghorn in order preserve that country from the terrors of the French, who had already entered it under the orders of general Serrurier.

But if we give credit to private reports, the Grand Duke, to preserve his neutrality, has been obliged to deliver up to them the important posts of Sault de la Biche, and they have made the republic of Lucaa defray the expences of their expedition, by means of a contribution of two millions of livers.

While the French thus march with rapid strides to the compleat conquest of Italy, they strive to lay asleep the powers of Germany by delays and evasions. Their plenipotentiaries at Rastadt continue to transmit to the directory the notes of the deputation of the empire with regard to the blockade of Ehreinbriestien, and the the contributions on the right band of the Rhine.

The two Austrian ministers, in the mean time, continue to play the farce of negociation. The count de Metternich votes for peace; the count de Lehrbach for war. Meanwhile the different plenipotentiaries beguile the tedium of their situation by feasts and assemblies. Nothing can exceed their gaiety, although upon the brink of that precipice into which is about gradually to fall the whole social system of the European governments.

The diet at Ratisbon, palsied and enerved by the torpor of the great powers, are also anxious to gain time. It has given for answer to the note concerning the march of the Russians, that no requisition had been made on their part for their passage through the territories of the empire.

It is rumored, that a kind of dissolution of the Germanic body is projected; that the king of Prussia has pretentions upon different parts of Westphalia; and that he is now making great preparations to assert them.

On the part of the emperor, great movements are taking place among the Austrian and Bavarian troops in Bavaria, which may perhaps conceal some great mystery, which time will at length develope.

The orders and counter orders to the Austrian generals rapidly succeed each other. The emperor has reviewed the Russians at Brunn, on the 28th and 29th of December; but accounts are contradictory with regard to the subsequent march.

At Vienna they always seem disposed to justify the strange song sung with which that court witnesses the disasters of the king of Naples, upon the score of the rashness with which that monarch broke with the French.

An unpleasant piece of news, if it be confirmed, is the death of prince Federick of Orange, commander in chief of the Austrian army in Italy, a most promising young warrior, whose loss will be severely lamented.

If it be true, that there exists upon the coutinent a great power, who, in this general wreck of all social order, consoles itself by the destruction of the ancient house of Bourbon, its wishes will ere long be completely fulfilled. The branch of Spain, the only one which remains upon the throne, is now upon the books of the directory, and is the order of the day. It is against it that they will direct their projects as soon as they have completed the conquest of the kingdom of Naples. Then will come the turn of the house of Austria, for it to all kings without exception, that they have sworn eternal hatred, and it is against them that they renew each year the oath of regicide.

Although our fortunate situation and the triumphs of our navy, the vigilance of our government and the patriotism of the nation seem to render it impossible for the enemy to reduce us to that state of degradation to which they have sunk so many other states, yet it appears by the speech of the minister of marine, that the directory have not abandoned the design of depriving us of the empire of the seas. But if these vain threats do not intimidate us, they ought always make us persevere against an enemy whose inexhaustible resources increase by the spoils of so many other nations.

For the rest, no country has performed its part in a more meritorious or illustrious manner. The resources which we have displayed are immense; for we have upheld, during the space of six years, the tottering fabric of the European states. By the victory of the Nile, we have furnished the powers on the continent with the infallible means of resuming their ascendancy against the common enemy of the inhuman race. We have omitted nothing that could give to their councils an energy suitable to their dignity.

If they blindly persist in running the road to ruin, we may wash our hands of it, and bend the whole of our exertions and our hopes towards the insuring of our own safety, so that amidst this genuine destruction we may preserve, for more peaceable times, the seeds of restoration, and a port, and asylum to shelter those who may escape from the general shipwreck.

Advices from Egypt, by the way of Constantinople, speak of an engagement between the advanced division of the army of the Pasha of Damas, and a detachment of that of Buonaparte. They add that the French sustained some loss, and that the Pasha intended to attack them more vigorously as soon as he had received his reinforcements. But the news from Constantinople have so often deceived us, that we may suspend our belief upon every thing that comes through that channel.

As to the arrival of general Berthier in Corsica, it seems to be a report of the same kind with that of his former arrival at Marseilles and at Bourdeaux, which turned out to be false. A piece of intelligence which appears more worthy of credit is, the manifesto of the Dey of Algiers against France.

February 5.

The report of the emperor's interference to save Naples by negociation is very improbable. We see how little his influence can procure for Germany; and he cannot be expected to save from the hands of the French so rich a prize as Naples affords.

We understand that admiral Nelson, in some private letters, describes the storm he met between Naples and Palermo as the most terrible he ever witnessed; and states that which he formerly met with off Sardinia, and in which the Vanguard was dismasted, to have been trifling in comparison with the late hurricane in the Mediterranean.

The expectation entertained of the Neapolitan dominions becoming the subject of negociation at Rastadt must be unfounded. The French will first seize them, and then any discussion about their right will be fruitless.

The flight of the king of Naples must have facilitated the progress of the French. The people will scarcely defend with zeal that cause which its leader, the person most deeply interested, abandons.

February 6.

The design which the French Directory have long entertained, of striking a blow at this country through Portugal, has been discovered, we hope seasonably by ministers, in order to enable them to defeat it. The French cherish the hope, that without naval means they will be able to direct the weight of their military force in such a manner as to counterbalance the influence of our naval victories, and to wrest from us the new acquired ascendency in the Mediterranean.—The nullity of the Spanish government presents them with an opportunity of attempting any enterprise which their policy may dictate against Portugal, and our complicated interests, involved in its fate. The attack has long been mediated, and recent events have given the French government time and leisure for its attempt. It appears, however, that ministers are fully aware of the danger, and are taking measures to avert it. Transports for the conveyance both of infantry and cavalry for the defence of the kingdom of Portugal are taken up. It certainly is of the utmost importance seasonably to oppose the design which the enemy meditate. Although the French army, commanded by Augreau, were prepared for the expedition, the passage of the Pyrenees would for some time retard his departure, after which he has a tedious march of more than six hundred miles to perform. This delay will enable government to take every precaution requisite for the defence of a kingdom, which both in peace and war is so nearly connected with the interests of the British empire.

Yesterday morning General Tarleton, with his lady and suite, left town in order to embark for Portugal. In addition to the force which this country may spare for the assistance of the Portuguese, it will be of great importance that time should be given to organize and animate the troops of our ally, a task for which the talents of the commander are peculiarly adapted.

The following conversation occurred in the Irish house of commons on Monday se'nnight, on Sir H. Cavendish's motion respecting insults offered to members:

Mr. Barrington said he had heard it asserted that day in the hall of the four courts, that the right hon. baronet had declared his determination to move for the removal of the parliament to Cork, in order to secure safety in its deliberations.

The right honorable attorney general said it was notorious that both the persons of members had been assaulted and abused by the most opprobrious names, their houses attacked by mobs, and themselves declared traitors to their country, for having voted in favour of Union; and that certainly such attempts to overawe the parliament would warrant is removal to Cork.

February 9.

By the cartels which arrived from France within these few days past, reports have reached this country later than any intelligence which has been received. In some circles it has been circulated that gen. Mack having concentrated his forces at Capau, had gained a considerable advantage over the enemy; the other is, that the king of Naples being received with the utmost loyalty and affection by his subjects in Sicily, was about to return to his continental dominions with a reinforcement of fifteen thousand men. It is difficult to say which of these stories is the most absurd. From the state of the Neapolitan army, under gen. Mack, little was to be expected. In the first glow of success they soon were worsted, by an army inferior in numbers, and compelled at least to retire. The French army has since been animated by success, and strengthened by reinforcements. As to any project of the king of Naples to return to the continent of Italy—what could be his motive? Has he not experienced the inadequacy of his new levies to oppose disciplined troops, and what reason is there to suppose that fifteen thousand Sicilian recruits are superior to the new raised troops of Italy? The story is absurd on the face of it. The reason here alledged for the king's flight was, that the very disposition of his subjects shewed that all was desperate.

PLYMOUTH, Jan. 15

Came in the Air, French schooner packet, of two guns, and 20 men, from Brest, bound to St. Dimingo, laden with a valuable cargo of muslins, and other merchandize; and it is said by the Frenchmen that she has much money on board; she was captured three days ago by the Clyde, of 32 guns, Captain Cunningham.

Came in the Vengeance French brig privateer, of 16 guns (12 brass,) and 70 men, from Bourdeaux, on a six weeks cruize, also captured by the Clyde frigate; this vessel captured the Hiram American ship that arrived here yesterday; the Clyde is also arrived in Cawsand Bay.

January 30.

Arrived L'Amiable Victoire, French brig privateer, of 18 guns, with 87 men, captured yesterday off Alderney by the Triton frigate of 32 guns, Capt. J Gore. The privateer is quite new, copper-bottomed, and sailed from Cherbourg but a few hours before the Triton fell in with her.

FRANCE.

PARIS, 17 Nivose, Jan. 6.

We may give implicit credit to the accounts contained in the letters from Venice, that 100,000 Ottomans are to be embarked at Adrianople, to act against the French, under the order of the Pacha of Damas.

A courier dispatched by the Directory to citizen Sleyes at Berlin, arrived yesterday. It is said that the intelligence which he brings states that the Court of Berlin is determined to maintain its neutrality.

January 7.

A German paper of the 22d Dec. gives an account of an attempt to set fire to the four corners of the city of Vienna. Several suspected persons have been apprehended, and soldiers parade the streets all night.

The one and twenty standards taken from the Neapolitan troops were yesterday presented to the Directory by citizen Laraitiere, aid de camp to gen. Championet. He assured the Directory at their public sitting, that the tri colored flag would float in a short time on the Towers of proud Naples, and on the astonished summit of Vesuvius.

Letters from Ratisbon continue to assure us, that a second body of Russian troops is on its march through Hungary, on their way to the coasts of the Adriatic. The two columns that are now traversing Moravia, will proceed directly to the coast of Italy.—The Cossacks of Don, that compose a part of them, came from Smolendo; they have been in motion since the last of July.—A great number of the officers speak German and French. Mr. de Resch, an imperial commissary, accompanies the first division; bread and forage are furnished by the imperial magazines—every other species of provision is provided by the inhabitants, and paid for in ready money.

January 8.

A letter from Milan informs us, but without mentioning any particulars, that general Mack has been made prisoner.

The king of Sardinia passed by Parma.—He was obliged to remain there some days, because his wife was taken ill. He thence pursued his route towards Leghorn, where he is to embark for Sardinia.

Louis Monneron, has undergone an examination before the Minister of Police, and was afterwards committed to prison.

ARMY OF ROME.

Extract from the report sent to the Minister at War, by Bonnamy, General of Brigade, and chief of the Staff of the army of Rome.

Head Quarters at Tora, Jan. 4.

Citizen Minister,

The General in Chief sends to the Directory an account of the difficulties he has had to surmount the taking possession of Pescara and Gatea, and finally in conducting the right wing of the army before Capua.

General Mack, dismayed by our victories and wishing to gain time to receive the reinforcements which Admiral Nelson had promised him solicited an armistice which was refused. I send you copies of this letter, and gen. Championet's answer.

Capua is occupied by a strong garrison, and is supported by General Mack's entrenched camp at Caserta.—Here this gen fancies he can defend Naples; it would have been better, however, that he had not abandoned the excellent positions on the Garigliano without fighting.

I proceed Citizen Minister, to the report which I have to make of the marches, of the successes, and of the position which the army now occupies.

In my report dated from————, I informed you that General Rey was advanced with the 7th and 25th Horse Chasseurs, the Po——legion, and some pieces of light artillery, to Fondi. Having reached this position of the batteries which defended the defiles of St. Andro, reduce Gaeta, and to pass the Giragliano. While the movements made by Gen. Rey demonstrated his intention of reaching that point, the first division marching in two columns successively occupied the camp of Tayola, before Frescati, and those of Velletri, Cisterna and Valimontona.

General Lamoine having taken Aquila, received orders to march to Sulmona, the central parts of all the roads of both the Abruzzoes. This movement was decisive; it had the dunble harrassing the left flank of the enemy, while General Duhem hung upon their other quarter, and of cutting off their retreat, by bringing about a junction of our two divisions.

General Duhem was on his part to march to Peschara and to take possession of it.

Gen. Lamoine in his march to Sulmons, was flanked by a column which took the route of Trivoli, Vicovaro Securcola, &c. and defended the left flank of the first division, while it opened a passage to the right of General Lemoine.

Meanwhile, the first division having reached Paperno, Forcentino, and Frosinona, continued its march in two columns—that of the right, commanded by General Matthieu, composed of the 30th and 97th of the line, and some squadrons of the 16th dragoons and 19th chasseurs, took possession of Caprano, and of its bridge over the Garigliano; the left, after having advanced beyond Fora, passed through Allatri, Velotri, Casmara, Giragliano at Isota, took a more advanced position; the 11th being on the road to Capua, and the 12th occupying Fora and Arpinau.

This division, during its difficult march, took 80 pieces of cannon, which the enemy did not venture to dispute with it.

Such was our position at Londi and Sora, when General Kellerman at last announced the reduction of Viterbo. He immediately received orders to proceed, in three marches, from Rome to Paperno, where he arrived on the 30th December. The General in Chief then detached his cavalry to the first division, and ordered General Rey to join him at Fondi with the remainder of his troops, where he arrived on the 11th in the evening.

The reinforcement which Gen. Kellerman brought to the right of the army, enabled the General in Chief to pursue the enemy. He therefore took a position on the Malfa with the first division; from the Malfa he advanced to Tora, where the road branches to Capua, Venafro, and Saint Germano, and finally at Calvi.

The Neapolitans with the exception of some posts before Capua, occupy the whole of that city, the left of Volturno, and the Campela Carzerta.

Notwithstanding this bold march the possession of Calvi was not perfectly tranquil with respect to the fate of his wings. He had received no news of General Rey, and no intelligence had reached him from the divisions of Generals Lemoine and Duhem, because the officers who carried the dispatches were long in arriving, in consequence of their having no travel round about three fourths of a circle of the immense positions which that army occupyed. At last, on the night of the 3d of Jan. we were informed of the surrender of Pescaro, and the reduction of Gates.

The General in Chief waits with impatience until the different divisions of the army be united. Another battle, and this monarchy, which has insulted the French Republic, shall disappear.

Extract of a letter from London, dated 30th January last.

"While we are upon that subject of blockade it may be material that you are informed of a recent decision in doctors commons: "The Columbia, capt. Weeks, bound from New-York, to Amsterdam, ship and cargo the property of Vos and Graves, and George Barnwell, of the former city," The judge condemned both ship and cargo for a breach of the blockade of the Taxel, committed by the captain in conjunction with the consignees in Hamburg; the ship having first gone to Cruxhaven for orders, and afterwards proceeded to Amsterdam, notwithstanding the knowledge of its blockade, by both consignees and master, and as the one was the undoubted agent for the cargo and the other of the ship, their acts were binding on the owners, and had clearly forfeited both ship and cargo. It was not contended, that any blame attached on the owners at New-York, the ship having sailed prior to the knowledge of the blockade having reached that port."

JACOB PERKINS,

HAVING invented an effectual check for detecting counterfeit Bank Paper, which has received the sanction of one Bank, and the approbation of the undersigned eminent artists, and having obtained a patent, securing to him, and to his assigns, the exclusive right of the invention, hereby offers to his fellow citizens the privilege of using it upon terms, to be agreed on between him and any person disposed to avail themselves of a guard against counterfeits.

THE undersigned having examined Jacob Perkin's new invented method to detect counterfeit Bank paper, do approve of the plan, it being impossible to engrave or sink two plates perfectly alike, without the original die or hub, the counterfeiter would find it impossible to make an impression which would perfectly gage with the check from the original die.

PHILADELPHIA,

SATURDAY EVENING, APRIL 20.

We have just received the following letter.

[True American.]

New-York, April 18.

"A vessel arrived here this morning from Guernsy in a very short passage, I have only time to inform you that the principle intelligence by her is

"That the army of Rome, now of Naples, has been attacked, but after three days hard fighting was victorious and has established itself in Naples, the Neapolitan Republic has been proclaimed and a provisional government organized. Ehrenbreistein has surrendered, —The whole of the Barbary States from Morocco to Egypt have at length taken up arms against the French.

Sung by Mr. DARLEY, at his Benefit, last evening.

Soul of Columbia, quenchless spirit come
Unroll thy Standard to the sullen sky,
Bind all thy war-robes, beat the furious drum,
Rouse, rouse thy Lion Heart, and fire thy Eagle Eye.

Dost thou not hear the hum of gathering War;
Dost thou not know
The insidious Foe
Yokes her gaunt Wolves, and mounts her midnight Car.

Dost thou not hear thy torter'd seamen's cries,
Poor hapless souls in dreary dungeons laid;
Toward thee they turn their dim imploring eyes;
Alas! they sink,—and no kind hand to aid.

Thou dost, and every son of thine
Shall rest in guilty peace no more,
With noble rage they pant to join,
The conflict's heat, the battle's roar.

Rouse to the tempest let thy banner fly,
Rouse, rouse thy Lion Heart and fire thy Eagle Eye.

Sales at Auction.

On Saturday the 20th April, at 2 o'clock P. M. on the premises,

Sundry Building and Garden Lots,

Some of them contigious to, and others at a small distance from the city, containing from about one quarter of an acre to about four acres each. The small lots front on Vine and Callowhill Streets, near Schuylkill—the large lots front on the south side of Francis Street, on the east side of Schuylkill river, on the west side of Schuylkill, second street, and on intermediate streets—the whole containing about 140 acres, being part of the tract known by the name of Springetsbury.

The situation of many of the lots is on high ground, commanding views of the Schuylkill, and supposed to be so much detached from the built parts of the city, as to be out of danger in case of an unhappy return of the fever.

Maps shewing the division of the ground, may be seen at the Coffee-house, at Ogden's tavern in Chesnut street, at Syberts tavern in the Nothern Liberties, and at the Middle and Upper Ferries on Schuylkill.

The abundance of stone, for building, on part of the ground, will prove very advantageous to purchasers, as it is proposed to sell at the same time those large quarries on the east side of the Schuylkill, near and above the bridge.

The terms will be cash for the lots of 49 1-2 and 50 feet front, and for those of a larger size one half cash immediately, and the other half to be paid in six months from the day of sale.

One Hundred Dollars Reward.

RAN away from the subscriber this day, at noon, two mulatto house servants, viz Nel, but commonly called Edward among his companions, well known as the subscriber's coachman and waiting man for several years in this city and in New-York—he is a tall strait made mulatto with a large bushy head of hair, about 32 years of age, has a low forehead, with small eyes, a sullen dark look and is much inclined to be abrupt and insolent, one of his legs something smaller than the other from a fracture in his youth; he generally wears a brown cloth coatee with red cuffs and cape and red edging, or sustian with red cuffs and cape; had on when he went away an old forest cloth surtout, mix'd brown and yellow, and has a box coat of light colored drab, with red and white livery lace, but as I do not know what other clothes he had on, may change his dress.

Nelly, calling herself Wife to the before named Ned, she is much above the middle stature, strait made with falling shoulders, has a remarkable ferocious countenance and is very passionate, quarrelsome, and noisy, she is rather a fair mulatto—has lost one or two of her front teeth, which she supplies with wax, and has a large scar between her shoulders occasioned by a blister; she is about forty five years of age, has a very masculine air in her walk, she carried away with her several gowns of different colored cotton; the above reward will be given for apprehending and securing them in any jail in the United States and giving notice to the subscriber; or fifty dollars for securing either of them.——All persons are cautioned against harboring, entertaining, or concealing the above servants or either of them; and all masters of vessels and others are warned against carrying them from the United States,
